"You -you discharged the cook at an hour's notice!" be exclaimed with flush-"I did."

Mr. Bowser sat down to the table with his gorge in his throat. The mother-in-law had thrown down the gaunt let, and he had picked it up.

"It is a picked up dinner," she explained as she brought it from the kitchen "This is one of my Irish stews, and I know you'll like it."

"A stew for dinner!" he gasped as his eyes began to roll. "Certainly, and not much besides, but if it's good enough for me it's good enough for you. I've heard about your finding fault with your dinners, but you can either ent this or leave it alone. When a man gets the idea that house is run for his benefit only it's time he was brought to book." Mr. Bowser meant to jump up and pound on the table and declare that be was master of his own house and wouldn't eat Irish stew for dinner if he had to starve to death, but to his intense surprise he not only clung to his chair, but actually found himself eating the stew. There was something in the kcy glare of the woman that had a restraining influence on his impetuosity. The coffee was work and the potatoes underdone, and he and opened his mouth to declare that he wouldn't ask a hog to such a meal when his mother-in-law fastened her eyes on bim and said

"You just keep quiet and be thankful for what you've got! I've known husbands to make a dinner on raw tur-
